

LONGEVITY IS ALWAYS FOUND EVERYWHERE AMONG CIVILIZED MAN.

Story of Bengalese, Who Lived to Be 370 Years Old.

Is longevity a lost secret? Or has the method of living gradually been "improved" in the proportion in which man's time on earth seems to have been reduced? From the high mark set by Methusalem, down the centuries until today when 100 years seems a remarkably long existence, many curious and remarkable cases of longevity are recorded. These examples establish no rule. Thus a mother of thirty-seven children attains the age of 105, a husband and wife live happily in matrimony for 148 years, and a spinster attains the age of 115.

Before Noah lived the waves with the flag ship Ark the peoples of the earth were so scarce that they often remained on this sphere to entertain one another for 500 to 600 years. In the next succeeding centuries the age limit seems to have been materially reduced, although Shem carried with his fellows some 600 years. But from the time of the reduction in human attainment of years seems to have been continual, broken only by the bold assertion of a Portuguese author who alleges that in 1566 a native of Bengal, whom he introduces as Numa Cugna, died at the age of 370.

Climate influences seem to play little part in pursuing the life of longevity. Pliny records that in the year 176 in levying a tax upon the people of sunny Italy it appeared that there lived in the country between the Appennines and the River Po fifty-four persons aged 100, fifty-seven aged 110, two 120, three 125, and three 140 years old.

About the same time, in 1763, a census of the inhabitants of Argulus in chilly Norway, showed 165 couples married eighty years, twenty couples married ninety years, twelve pairs married from 100 to 105 years, and one couple living as man and wife for 110 years.

Advocates of Long Ago. Some of our venerable ancestors were firm advocates of the anti-race suicide doctrine. In 1768 Mary Prescott, a resident of Sussex, England, died at the age of 105 and was mourned by thirty-seven children. In 1792 Francis Honore, for many years consul for the Venetians in Smyrna, died at the age of 113. It is said he walked eight miles every day and for many years subsisted on broth.

He married but five times, and was the proud father of forty-nine children. At the age of 100 he lost all his white hair, and the new crop was of the original color. The historian tells us that at the age of 112 he cut two teeth.

James Gay (happily named) died in Bordeaux, France, in 1776, at the age of 101, and still found time to marry sixteen times. Yet he died childless. Margaret McWhorter, whom we have mentioned in 1768 at the age of 106 after surviving the unfortunate number of thirteen husbands, in striking contrast is the career of Mrs. Agnes Skinner, who died in England in 1699 at the age of 119, after a single widowhood of ninety-two years.

A most remarkable case is that recorded in Poland of Margaret Krzywicka, who died in 1778 at the age of 108. At ninety-four she married her third husband, Gaspard Raykolt, then a bachelor of 100. It is said he had just died at the age of 113. During the fourteen years Mr. and Mrs. Raykolt kept house there were born to them two boys and one girl, and none could ever chew solid food.

John Doe, who died in the sudden death of a friend, in 1774, dropped dead from shock at the age of 125. When 80 he broke both legs and at the age of 100 he was horribly burned by falling into an open fire place, but these shocks did not seriously affect him.

Old Time Profitable Risk. Probably the most profitable risk ever carried by an insurance company was upon the life of Jacob W. Luning, who took out a policy in the Equitable Assurance Society of London in 1803, when quite a young man, at the age of 30, and his heirs collected $1,000 from the company.

Many cases are cited of the attainment of longevity ranging from 100 years to that of Peter Zartan, a Hungarian, said to have died at 155. Few, however, sustain the claims of authorities that the falling memory of many aged people often lead them to unintended deception while the claims of many aged persons are argued to be founded on vanity or the uncertainties of birth dates caused by the shifting of slaves in the days before the civil war.

Henry Jenkins, an Englishman who died at the ripe age of 160 in 1670, was produced in court as a witness at the age of 157. Placed under oath he was cautioned by the judge to be accurate in all his statements, and he was found to his age. Jenkins at once produced two witnesses, each over eighty years old, who testified that when they were boys James Sands of Staffordshire, England, is reputed to have lived 140 years, his wife 120. A proof of this is recorded that he outlived five leases of twenty-one years each, and he died to him after marriage.

Probably the most startling "oldest inhabitant" story is that concerning Mr. and Mrs. John Rowin, both of whom died in the place of their birth, Hungary, in 1741; he aged 172 and she, 164. Their married life lasted 148 years and at their death they left an infant orphan aged 16.
